For those of you who don't know me, my name is Juan Carlos Santana. I have had the pleasure of being well accepted by the fitness industry, presenting seminars all over the world, and authoring more than my share of books, tapes, DVDs, and audio CDs. Many of you have given me wonderful compliments over the years, and I'm humbled by and grateful for your support and respect. To help people like you is all I've ever wanted out of my profession, and I truly feel blessed.

In all honesty, I'm just like you. I'm a hard-working guy who loves his job. I believe in old-fashioned hard work and in assuming responsibility for my own life. I have taken the less traveled road of making it to success by the sweat off my back, and I love sharing my experiences with everyone in the fitness industry. As many of you know, I spend my time on the road at various seminars, in my studio putting together what some have called the best fitness education products available, or at the Institute of Human Performance (IHP) training clients and pushing the envelope.
